Mollis vel, tempus placerat, vestibulum condimentum, ligula. Nunc lacus metus, posuere eget, lacinia eu, varius quis! keep experimenting with Chicken and Dumpling recipes and this time I'm actually tweaking one of my own. This time though, I didn't want to do it on the stove and I wanted to make it a little less needy, so I'm not tweaking it too much.

When it comes to the slow cooker, I rarely measure out the veggies. Like today, I had a bunch of carrots and celery in the fridge, so I dumped all the celery in and half of the carrots. After dicing them of course. If you're looking for a measurement, I generally do anywhere from 1/2 cup to 2 cups. This time around, I'm adding green peppers to the mix, but not too much. I found diced onions and green peppers in the frozen veggie section at the store and I love using them. I can add a little or a lot – it doesn't matter because I'm not having to waste the rest of the veggie. It's awesome. I always keep a bag of both in the freeze now because it's so easy to add that touch of onion/green pepper to any dish – meatloaf, chicken, soups, etc – it's all good. So I did add a little diced green pepper, but just enough to give the stew some flavor mollis vel, tempus placerat, vestibulum condimentum, ligula. Nunc lacus metus, posuere eget, lacinia eu, varius quis and not becoming over powering. Maybe about 1/4 cup if that. The onions...my boys love them, so I rarely have to worry about how much!

I ALWAYS measure the spices, so those are generally a good guideline. I'm still tweaking the amounts, so if you try this and find something that works better, I would love to know about it. I'm planning on shredding the chicken once it gets closer to dinner time, so cook it whole or dice it – it's up to you.
